

For this week's discussion, let's address revision and time management. One of the challenges in being in an online course is that you have to do a lot of revision work on your own, so in your response, consider the following:

- What are the strategies you use for editing and revising your own text?
  - Are you leaning on anyone to help you with your revisions?
  - What challenges have you faced with revising your own texts?
  - What advice would you give to a student considering taking an online writing course?
-

For this week's discussion, let's discuss "credible sources".

- What have you been told about finding credible sources for your research?
  - Where do you usually look to find credible sources?
  - Who do you consider as a credible author?
-

Let's reflect on technology in our lives for this week's discussion. We've talked a lot this term about reading, writing and technology, so in your response, consider the following:

- Has your view of "traditional college writing" changed because of technology?
  - Have your own personal writing strategies for writing changed because of technology?
  - Do you find yourself noticing more of the things you're reading and how they're being delivered, print/online? Feel free to pull any of the readings into your discussion.
-

After reading more about working with visual texts in your textbook this week, consider the follow questions for this week's discussion:

- How does our reading of visual images differ from our reading of print-based texts?

- What are some of the differences between the layout/structure of visual texts verses the layout/structure of print-based texts?
- What did you learn about visual texts after reading the information on one of the links below?
- What is your experience with visual texts?

Bonus: Check out one or all of the following links for this DQ and for more discussion on analyzing visual texts:

<http://writingcommons.org/open-text/information-literacy/visual-literacy/breaking-down-an-image>

<https://owl.english.purdue.edu/owl/owlprint/725/>

http://twp.duke.edu/uploads/assets/visual\_analysis.pdf

---

We're nearing the end of the semester and it's been a busy one!

For this week's discussion, reflect on your experience in online English 101.